The University anthem has been composed in Assamese. For the consumption of the cosmopolitan audience a precis of the same is provided below.

The anthem wraps in its melody the inviolable values that the University enshrines. The University conduces the confluence of legal knowledge and judicial integrity and therefore stands an epitome of legal sapience. The ideals extolled by the University condition its students to rise as prudent architects of healthy and virile society.

In the expressions of the poet, on account of its momentous endeavour towards strengthening the society this University stands unparalleled and peerless. This University radiates the light of knowledge, embodying as it were, within itself the indelible ideals of justice and legal prudence. This effulgence, emanating out of the alcoves of the University, bespeak/resound the ascendance of law and justice in the society.

As articulated by the bard...the coveted goal of this University is to promulgate legal knowledge in order to ensure that justice prevails over the society. In concurrence with its avowed principles, the University is earnestly engaged in pursuit of legal knowledge and research which would facilitate dissemination of legal knowledge in every nook and cranny of the society. The anthem affirms that this University stands unequalled - unrivalled in its intent to shape its students as committed citizens who would lend their unflinching support to create a strong society a strong nation.

University Report by Vice-Chancellor, NLUJA, Assam

1. Introduction

The National Law University and Judicial Academy, Assam (NLUJA, Assam) has, over the years, evolved as an important institution for legal education, research and scholarly engagement in the North-Eastern Region of the country. As the first National Law University established in the Region, the University occupies a distinctive position within the national legal education landscape. Its academic endeavour has consistently sought to combine rigorous legal education with research, professional development and an appreciation of the wider social and institutional contexts within which law operates.

The year under review, extending from 11 October 2025 to 30 September 2026, has been a period of sustained academic activity and institutional development. The University's work during the year has encompassed its core academic programmes, research and scholarly pursuits, student development, co-curricular and extension activities, as well as continuing efforts towards strengthening its academic and physical infrastructure. The year has also witnessed several initiatives directed towards consolidating the University's institutional capacity and broadening the opportunities available to its students and scholars.

The Fourth Convocation of the University provides the occasion to take stock of this journey. A Convocation represents the culmination of a significant phase of academic endeavour for those who receive their degrees, while also providing the University an opportunity to reflect upon the responsibilities that accompany the education and training imparted within its classrooms, libraries and research spaces. In a discipline such as law, academic attainment carries a particular responsibility, since legal knowledge is ultimately connected with the functioning of institutions, the protection of rights and the pursuit of justice.

At the Fourth Convocation, the University shall confer the B.A., LL.B. (Hons.) Five-Year Integrated Degree upon 53 graduands, including those receiving their degrees in absentia. The LL.M. One-Year Degree shall be conferred upon 48 graduands, while 6 scholars shall receive the Ph.D. Degree. In all, 107 graduates and scholars shall mark this important stage of their academic journey at the present Convocation.

These figures constitute an important measure of the University's academic work during the years that have led to this occasion. They also represent three distinct stages of engagement with legal knowledge—from foundational professional education, to advanced legal study, and finally to original scholarly research. The conferment of these degrees is, therefore, both an academic culmination and a reminder of the University's continuing responsibility to sustain the quality, depth and relevance of the education and scholarship it offers.

The present Report records the principal developments and activities of the University during the period under review. It seeks to place before the University community an account not only of its academic and scholarly accomplishments, but also of the institutional initiatives, student-centred activities and developmental measures that have contributed to the University's progress during the year. The Fourth Convocation thus provides an appropriate point at which to take stock of the University's work over the past year and to reaffirm its continuing commitment to the pursuit of academic distinction and institutional growth.

2. Expansion of Academic Programmes and Intake

The academic year 2026–27 has marked a significant step in the expansion of the University's academic base. In response to the growing demand for quality legal education and with a view to widening access within its existing academic framework, the University has introduced an additional section each in its undergraduate and postgraduate programmes. The B.A., LL.B. (Hons.) Five-Year Integrated Course is now being offered through two sections of 70 students each, while the LL.M. programme is likewise being conducted through two sections of 70 students each. This expansion has enabled the University to accommodate a larger and more diverse cohort of students while retaining the academic structure necessary for meaningful classroom engagement and effective delivery of legal education.

The expansion has also extended to the University's research programme. During the academic year, 12 research scholars have been admitted to the Ph.D. programme, thereby strengthening the University's research community and adding to the intellectual diversity of its academic environment. The enlargement of the student and research-scholar base represents an important phase in the University's continuing academic growth and places renewed emphasis on the corresponding strengthening of teaching, research supervision, academic resources and institutional infrastructure.

3. Campus Development and Infrastructure

The University continues to be supported by a well-developed residential and academic campus comprising its Administrative and Academic Blocks, Knowledge Resource Centre, residential hostels, Multipurpose Indoor Hall, health and student-support facilities and the associated ICT-enabled academic infrastructure. The existing campus provides the essential physical foundation for the University's academic and residential activities, with modern classrooms, library resources, hostel facilities, sports infrastructure, connectivity and other student-support amenities.

During the year under review, the University's physical infrastructure has been further augmented as part of the continuing second phase of campus development. A significant addition has been the 300-bedded Student Hostel, constructed with the financial assistance of the Government of Assam. The facility was completed and inaugurated on 15 March 2026, adding substantially to the University's residential capacity and providing dedicated accommodation and associated facilities for students.

The Vice-Chancellor's Residence, also taken up under the second phase of campus development, is presently nearing completion. The project constitutes a further addition to the University's residential and institutional infrastructure and is expected to strengthen the campus's overall administrative and residential facilities. The construction of the Registrar's Residence is also proposed as part of this phase of development.

The augmentation of infrastructure during the year is particularly significant in the context of the University's expanding academic intake. The development of additional residential and institutional facilities is intended to ensure that physical capacity grows in step with the University's academic and research expansion.

4. Enriching the Academic Environment

The academic life of the University during the year has been enriched by a sustained engagement with distinguished voices from the judiciary, the Bar, academia, professional institutions and civil society. Through special lectures, workshops and academic interactions, the University has sought to bring contemporary questions of law and public life into direct conversation with its students and faculty. The range of these engagements itself reflects the widening contours of legal education at NLUJA, Assam.

The year opened with engagement with questions at the very foundations of the constitutional order. Prof. (Dr.) Upendra Baxi, Eminent Jurist and Professor Emeritus, engaged the University with the Jurisprudence of Law and Morality, while Senior Advocate Mr. Arvind P. Datar revisited some of the defining constitutional moments of independent India through his lecture on The Remarkable Legal Journey of Nani A. Palkhivala. Mr. Vijay Hansaria, Senior Advocate, Supreme Court of India and Member of the Academic Council of the University, subsequently spoke on The Making of the Constitution: Behind the Scenes. These were followed by Mr. Vikas Singh, Senior Advocate, Supreme Court of India and President, Supreme Court Bar Association, New Delhi, who addressed the Importance of the Election Commission in our Constitution.

The constitutional conversation acquired a further contemporary dimension with the visit of Mr. Kapil Sibal, Senior Advocate, Supreme Court of India and Member of Rajya Sabha, who delivered a special lecture on The Independence of the Judiciary and the Future of Indian Democracy. His engagement with the University added another significant perspective to the continuing academic examination of constitutional institutions and democratic governance.

The University's academic engagements thereafter extended into areas where law increasingly intersects with technology, commerce, science and professional practice. Mr. Manas Kumar Chaudhuri, Senior Partner, Khaitan & Co. LLP, addressed the Amendments of the Competition Act and their Impact on Stakeholders. Prof. Benjamin Gregg of the University of Texas spoke on Human Genetic Engineering, while Ms. Kajri Roy, Legal Advisor, BCCI, engaged with the emerging field of Disability and Sports Law. These interactions brought questions of economic regulation, technological and scientific advancement, inclusion and professional practice within the ambit of the University's academic discourse.

The changing nature of the legal profession and the growing influence of technology emerged as a particularly prominent theme during the latter part of the year. Hon'ble Justice M. Sundar, Chief Justice of the High Court of Manipur, delivered a special lecture on Future Lawyer: AI, ADR and Commercial Litigation. Hon'ble Justice Suman Shyam, Judge, Bombay High Court and former Judge, Gauhati High Court, subsequently addressed Law, Technology and AI – The Future of Legal Profession. The University also benefited from the practical perspective of Mr. E. V. Chandru, Legal Advisor, National Investigation Agency, New Delhi, who conducted a workshop on the New Criminal Laws, connecting the study of the new criminal law framework with its application in the investigation and administration of criminal justice.

The constitutional implications of technological change received further attention through the special lecture delivered by Hon'ble Justice Dinesh Maheshwari, former Judge of the Supreme Court of India and Chairman, Law Commission of India, on Constitutional Law in the Age of Artificial Intelligence: Fundamental Rights and Fundamental Duties vis-à-vis Algorithm. The lecture brought into focus questions that are likely to assume increasing significance as algorithmic systems become embedded in governance, institutions and everyday life.

The year's academic engagement concluded, during the reporting period, on a distinctly human and social note with the special lecture by Ms. Sunitha Krishnan, Padma Shri Awardee, social activist and Chief Functionary and Co-Founder of Prajwala, on Women and Child Trafficking. Her interaction brought to the University the lived realities of trafficking, exploitation, rescue, rehabilitation and empowerment, reinforcing the connection between legal education and the social conditions to which the law must respond.

Taken together, these engagements portray an academic environment in motion. The University's students and scholars have, during the year, encountered constitutional jurists and senior advocates, judges of constitutional courts, corporate legal practitioners, scholars, investigators and social practitioners. The subjects have moved from law and morality, constitutionalism and democratic institutions to competition, disability, genetic engineering, criminal law, artificial intelligence and human trafficking. In this manner, the academic life of NLUJA, Assam has continued to extend beyond the formal curriculum, placing the study of law in conversation with the institutions, technologies and human realities that are shaping its present and its future.

4. Research Centres and Scholarly Engagement

Research at the University during the year under review has continued to develop through its network of specialised Centres, each addressing a distinct area of legal and interdisciplinary inquiry. The work of these Centres has extended beyond conventional academic programming to include field-based research, professional capacity-building, community engagement, legal-aid work and publication. This has enabled research to remain connected with the institutional, social and cultural contexts within which law operates.

A particularly significant strand of activity has emerged through the DPIIT-IPR Chair, whose work during the year has combined intellectual property research with field-based engagement in the North-Eastern Region. Interns associated with the Chair undertook field visits to the Janajati Samellan at Royal Global University and to the Ali-Aye-Ligang festival of the Mising community. The Chair also facilitated an educational visit by the University's LL.M. IPR students to the 1st Battalion of the National Disaster Response Force at Patgaon and undertook field-based documentation relating to Mayong Village, Meghalaya and Mizoram. These engagements provided an opportunity to examine intellectual property questions in relation to indigenous communities, cultural practices, traditional knowledge and regional resources.

The research orientation of the Chair was complemented by specialised professional training. On 28 February 2026, the DPIIT-IPR Chair organised an Advanced Trademark Training Boot Camp on “Law, Filing and Complexities of the Digital Age”, bringing together technical, training and expert-panel components. The activity reflected the increasing interface between intellectual property law, digital practices and the practical requirements of registration and protection.

The University's Centre for Clinical Legal Education and Legal Aid Cell (CCLELAC) continued to provide a different, field-oriented dimension to legal scholarship and education. Its activities during the year ranged from Constitution Day and voting-rights awareness programmes to legal-awareness work in schools and local communities, an environmental and legal awareness programme, orientation of volunteers, a door-to-door legal-awareness drive and a visit to the Lok Adalat at the District and Sessions Court, Amingaon. The Centre's work demonstrates the University's effort to connect legal education with access to justice and the lived experience of communities beyond the classroom.

The interdisciplinary character of this engagement was evident in the collaboration between CCLELAC and the Centre for Humanities and Social Sciences in March 2026, when student volunteers presented a skit addressing prevention of sexual harassment at the workplace. The activity used a pedagogical and cultural form to communicate a substantive legal issue and reflected the University's continuing effort to situate legal knowledge within wider social and human contexts.

The Centre for Disability Studies and Health Laws also contributed to specialised legal discourse during the year through a lecture on Disability and Sports Law by Ms. Kajri Roy, Legal Advisor, BCCI, on 4 May 2026. The programme brought questions of disability rights into engagement with sports law and policy, reinforcing the Centre's role as a specialised platform for interdisciplinary discussion on disability, health and law.

The University's research culture has also continued to find expression through its scholarly publications. The publication architecture of the University encompasses general law reviews as well as specialised publications in public policy, environmental law, intellectual property, disability studies, child rights, corporate law and other emerging areas of legal scholarship. The NLUA Law and Policy Review issued a call for papers for Volume X in November 2025 and, towards the close of the reporting period, issued the call for Volume XI on 29 September 2026. The continuing publication cycle provides an institutional forum for sustained scholarly engagement beyond individual academic events.

Taken together, these activities indicate a research culture that is not confined to the production of academic papers or the organisation of seminars. During the year, research at NLUJA has increasingly found expression in field inquiry, community engagement, professional training, specialised legal discourse and institutional publication. The University's Centres thereby continue to function as spaces in which legal knowledge is tested against practical realities, regional experience and emerging areas of law.

5. Externally Supported Research and Professional Projects

During the year under review, the University has also undertaken a number of externally supported and commissioned projects that extend its academic and research engagement into the domains of continuing legal education, professional development, rights-based institutional work and public policy. These initiatives have brought the University's legal expertise into engagement with practising members of the profession, public institutions and contemporary questions of law and governance.

A significant initiative in this regard is the Continuing Legal Education (CLE) and Lawyer Fellowship Programme, undertaken with the support of the Azim Premji Foundation. The programme extends across Assam, Nagaland, Arunachal Pradesh and Mizoram and is directed towards strengthening continuing legal education and professional capacity among lawyers and early-career advocates in the four States. During the year, the University undertook the requisite institutional and programme-related engagements for the continuation of the initiative, including processes for the forthcoming cohorts of the CLE and Lawyer Fellowship Programmes. The University's role in the initiative extends its academic and professional engagement beyond its degree programmes to the continuing development of the legal profession across the Region. The University's notifications during the reporting period reflect the continuing recruitment and institutional implementation of the Programme.

The University also undertook Project Ability Empowerment, under which contractual engagement was initiated during February 2026. The project brings the University's legal and institutional capabilities to bear upon questions concerning the rights, protection and welfare of persons with disabilities. The University's notification of 18 February 2026 records the engagement under the project and marks its incorporation within the University's externally supported project activities during the year.

During the reporting period, the University further undertook a commissioned project pursuant to the Memorandum of Understanding entered into with the Ministry of Housing and Urban Affairs (MoHUA), Government of India. The assignment concerns the undertaking of studies on Real Estate Laws, RERA judgments and Affordable Housing Policies. In furtherance of the objectives of the MoU, the University has formulated a detailed research proposal setting out the proposed objectives, thematic areas of study, activities, implementation framework, deliverables and timelines. The project accordingly brings within the University's research engagement a significant area of contemporary public law and policy, encompassing the legal and regulatory framework governing real estate, the developing body of RERA jurisprudence and questions concerning affordable housing policy.

The significance of these projects lies in the range of constituencies and legal questions with which they place the University in sustained engagement. The Azim Premji Foundation-supported programme addresses the continuing education and professional development of lawyers across four States of the North-Eastern Region; Project Ability Empowerment brings legal expertise to questions of disability rights and institutional protection; and the MoHUA-commissioned project engages with real estate regulation, RERA jurisprudence and affordable housing policy. Together, these initiatives represent an extension of the University's academic mandate into continuing professional education, rights-based engagement and commissioned public-policy research, thereby strengthening the applied dimension of its legal scholarship.

6. University Publications

Publication remains an important component of the University's academic activity, providing a durable medium through which research, legal scholarship and institutional knowledge are placed in the public domain. During the year under review, the University's publication activity included a substantive book on access to justice, the continuation of its principal law journals, and a special edition of its environmental law publication.

The University published Access to Justice: Through Free Legal Aid in 2025, edited by Dr. Kailash Jeenger, Dr. Himangshu Ranjan Nath, Dr. Monmi Gohain and Mr. Saheb Chowdhury, faculty members of the University. The volume examines free legal aid as an essential component of access to justice and considers its significance in ensuring that the legal system remains accessible beyond considerations of economic capacity. The publication reflects the University's continuing engagement with clinical legal education, legal aid and the constitutional and institutional dimensions of access to justice. The book carries ISBN 978-81-941086-4-1 and has been published by the National Law University and Judicial Academy, Assam.

The University's flagship NLUA Law Review continued as an annual peer-reviewed publication. Volume 8, carrying ISSN 2455-8680, represents the University's continuing endeavour to provide a forum for interdisciplinary and multidisciplinary legal scholarship. The journal is student-edited under the supervision of a Faculty Editorial Board and accommodates research articles, case comments, book reviews and other scholarly contributions. Its editorial structure provides students with an opportunity to participate directly in the processes of legal scholarship and academic publication.

The NLUA Law and Policy Review, the University's faculty-run peer-reviewed journal, also continued as part of its established publication programme. Volumes 8 and 9, carrying ISSN 2455-8672, represent the journal's continuing engagement with legal scholarship at the intersection of law and public policy. The Review publishes scholarly articles, analysis of judicial decisions and legislation, and book reviews, and provides an academic forum for sustained examination of contemporary legal and policy questions.

The University's environmental law scholarship was further represented by Lex Terra, published by the Centre for Environmental Law, Advocacy and Research (CELAR). Issues 46, 47 and 48, brought out as a Special Edition in 2026, carry ISSN 2455-0965. The publication provides a specialised forum for environmental law research and reflects CELAR's continuing engagement with environmental jurisprudence and issues of particular significance to the North-Eastern Region.

These publications, taken together, reflect the breadth of the University's scholarly engagement—from access to justice and legal aid, to interdisciplinary legal scholarship, law and public policy, and environmental jurisprudence. They also represent different modes of academic authorship and participation, encompassing faculty scholarship, student editorial work and specialised Centre-based research. Publication thus continues to serve not merely as a record of academic activity, but as an important means through which the University's scholarship enters wider legal and public discourse.

7. Student Achievements, Flagships Competitions and Student Life

The University's student life during the year under review extended beyond the formal curriculum to encompass advocacy, competition, sports and collective student initiatives. These activities provide important settings in which students develop capacities of research, argument, teamwork, leadership and representation, while also contributing to the University's wider academic and institutional culture.

The University's mooting and advocacy teams recorded a series of notable results during the year. At Leguleian 6.0, held in November 2025, Ambujesh Upamanyu and Angaraj Anand secured the Runners-Up position, with Ambujesh Upamanyu being adjudged Best Speaker. In January 2026, Sneha Kumari and Nishika Chauhan emerged as the Winners of the 2nd Client Counselling Competition, with Nishika Chauhan receiving the distinction of Best Counsel. At the 38th BCI National All India Inter-University Moot Court Competition, 2026, the University's team comprising Ambujesh Upamanyu, Prosfutita Singha and Niyor Ghatowar advanced to the Quarter-Finals.

The University's representation in external mooting also produced a significant result at the 2nd B.R. Ambedkar Moot Court Competition, held as part of the 8th North East Graduate Congress at USTM, Meghalaya. Ambujesh Upamanyu, Angaraj Anand and Prosfutita Singha emerged as the Winners of the competition.

The development of advocacy skills also begins within the University. The 8th Annual Capacity Building Moot Court Competition, held on 21–22 November 2025, provided students of the first-year batch with an early and structured introduction to legal research, memorial preparation and oral advocacy. The competition forms part of the University's continuing effort to develop advocacy skills from the formative stages of legal education.

The University's own flagship student platforms also continued during the year. Abhiveera 2026, the University's annual inter-university national sports fest, was held from 26 to 29 March 2026. The fest provides a competitive sporting platform for students from universities and institutions across the country and forms an important part of the University's student-development calendar.

Beyond sporting competition, the event promotes teamwork, discipline, sportsmanship and interaction among participating student communities.

The year also witnessed notable achievements by NLUJA students in external sporting competitions. At NUJS Kolkata Fest Invicta 2026, Ananya Saxena and Bedashmrita Parashar secured Gold in Women's Doubles Table Tennis, while Leah Sangma secured Gold in Shot Put. NLUJA students also secured Bronze medals in relay events, with Babita Baro securing Bronze in Discus Throw, the 400 metres and Relay.

Taken together, these activities demonstrate the breadth of student development at NLUJA. Mooting and client counselling cultivate research, analysis, drafting and advocacy; inter-university competitions provide opportunities for students to test these abilities in external forums; while Abhiveera and participation in other sporting events foster discipline, teamwork and institutional representation. Student life, in this sense, constitutes an integral complement to the University's academic programme.

8. Social Engagement and Community Outreach

The University's engagement with society during the year under review has found concrete expression through its Legal Aid Clinic, the Centre for Clinical Legal Education and Legal Aid Cell (CCLELAC), and the National Service Scheme (NSS). These initiatives have enabled students to take legal knowledge and civic responsibility beyond the classroom and into communities, schools, justice-delivery institutions and other public spaces.

The Legal Aid Clinic and CCLELAC continued their field-based engagement with the local community and the institutions of the justice system. The year commenced for the Clinic with a visit to the District Legal Services Authority, Amingaon, on 17 October 2025, providing students with direct exposure to the institutional framework through which legal aid is administered. This was followed by a Door-to-Door Legal Awareness Campaign in Amingaon on 23 October 2025, taking legal literacy directly to members of the surrounding community.

Constitutional and civic awareness formed another important strand of this engagement. CCLELAC and NSS jointly organised a Constitution Day programme on 26 November 2025, followed by a Voting Rights Awareness Campaign at Amingaon on 10 December 2025, observed on Human Rights Day. A further Voting Rights Awareness Drive was undertaken in Amingaon on 26 February 2026. These programmes connected constitutional principles and democratic participation with community-level awareness.

The outreach programme also addressed specific questions of social justice. On 11 March 2026, volunteers of CCLELAC, in collaboration with the Centre for Humanities and Social Sciences, presented a skit on the prevention of sexual harassment at the workplace as part of the observance of International Women's Day and Women's History Month. The use of a participatory and accessible form of communication enabled a legal issue of immediate social relevance to be addressed beyond conventional classroom instruction.

Legal literacy was further extended to younger members of the community through a Legal Awareness Programme at Saraighat Higher Secondary School, Amingaon, on 22 May 2026. The initiative brought the University's clinical legal education work into a school setting and provided an opportunity for students to engage directly with questions of law and legal awareness at an early stage.

The latter part of the year witnessed a renewed emphasis on strengthening the University's own capacity for community legal service. An Orientation Programme for Legal Aid Clinic volunteers was organised on 20 August 2026, followed a week later by another Door-to-Door Legal Awareness Drive in Amingaon on 27 August 2026. The year concluded, within the reporting period, with a visit to the Lok Adalat at the District and Sessions Court, Amingaon, on 12 September 2026, giving student volunteers direct exposure to an important mechanism of alternative dispute resolution.

Alongside its legal-aid initiatives, the National Service Scheme continued to cultivate a broader ethic of service among students. A campus Cleanliness Drive on 17 October 2025 involved more than 20 students in removing litter and plastic waste around the Administrative and Academic Blocks. On 7 November 2025, the NSS Unit, in collaboration with Narayana Super-speciality Hospital, organised a Blood Donation Camp, extending student participation into a direct public-health and humanitarian initiative.

The pattern of activities during the year demonstrates that the University's social engagement is not confined to occasional outreach programmes. It operates through several connected forms of service: legal assistance and literacy, constitutional and electoral awareness, school engagement, rights-based communication, exposure to justice-delivery mechanisms, environmental responsibility and humanitarian service. In this manner, the University's social mission is carried into practice through sustained student participation and structured institutional engagement with the surrounding community.

9. Student Welfare, Equity and Support

The University recognises student welfare as an integral component of the academic environment and has accordingly developed a range of institutional mechanisms addressing financial assistance, student grievances, equity, safety, dignity and access to support. These mechanisms operate alongside the University's academic, residential, medical, counselling and mentoring arrangements and are intended to ensure that students have appropriate institutional avenues for support and redressal during their period of study.

Financial assistance constitutes an important element of this framework. During the year, the NLUJA Merit-cum-Means Scholarship Scheme continued to provide institutional financial assistance to eligible students on the basis of prescribed academic and means-related criteria. The Scheme represents the University's continuing commitment to ensuring that financial circumstances do not become an impediment to the pursuit of legal education. During the year, institutional scholarships were extended to 55 students, involving a total financial commitment of ₹16.50 lakh. The University also facilitates access to other available scholarship opportunities, including the PM-Vidyalaxmi Scheme.

The University's commitment to an equitable academic environment is supported by its Equal Opportunity Cell, constituted in accordance with the relevant UGC framework. The Cell addresses issues concerning students belonging to Scheduled Castes, Scheduled Tribes, Other Backward Classes, minorities and persons with disabilities, with the objective of enabling their full and equal participation in the academic, intellectual, social and cultural life of the University.

The University has also instituted a dedicated mechanism for addressing complaints relating to caste-based discrimination. An online grievance mechanism for SC/ST/OBC students enables complaints to be lodged directly through the University's website, with a designated Nodal Officer responsible for monitoring the complaints and taking appropriate remedial measures. This mechanism provides an additional institutional avenue for addressing concerns relating to discrimination and ensuring access to redressal.

The Internal Complaints Committee (ICC) constitutes another important component of the University's institutional safeguards. Constituted in accordance with the Sexual Harassment of Women at Workplace (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act, 2013, the ICC provides the prescribed institutional mechanism for addressing complaints of sexual harassment and for promoting a safe and dignified environment within the University.

Student grievances are addressed through a formal Student Grievance Redressal Cell, constituted under the UGC (Redressal of Grievances of Students) Regulations, 2023. The mechanism includes an Ombudsman and a designated institutional committee, thereby providing students with a structured avenue for the consideration and redressal of grievances. The University also maintains an online grievance redressal portal, facilitating access to the mechanism.

These institutional arrangements are supported by the University's broader regulatory framework, which includes policies and regulations relating to mentoring, gender equity, remedial instruction, support for slow and advanced learners, student participation and academic conduct.

Taken together, these measures constitute a structured student welfare and institutional support architecture extending beyond financial assistance to encompass equity, dignity, non-discrimination, safety and grievance redressal. They reflect the University's responsibility to ensure that the pursuit of legal education takes place within an institutional environment that is accessible, fair, secure and responsive to legitimate student concerns.

10. Conclusion

The year under review has been one of consolidation, expansion and institutional strengthening for the National Law University and Judicial Academy, Assam. The University's academic programmes have expanded in response to growing demand, its research community has widened, and its engagement has extended across legal scholarship, professional education, commissioned research, clinical legal education and community outreach. At the same time, investments in academic and residential infrastructure have sought to provide the physical and institutional foundations necessary to sustain this growth.

The University's development during the year has also been reflected in the range of opportunities available to its students and scholars. Academic lectures and research activities have brought leading jurists, practitioners, scholars and public figures into conversation with the University's academic community. Mooting, sports, student organisations and community-based initiatives have provided complementary spaces in which legal knowledge is tested through advocacy, collaboration, discipline, service and engagement with the world beyond the classroom. The University's student welfare and support architecture, including institutional scholarships, counselling, equity mechanisms and formal grievance-redressal structures, has likewise remained an important part of the conditions within which such academic development takes place.

Research and institutional engagement have continued to extend the University's work beyond its degree programmes. Through its research Centres, externally supported projects, professional training programmes and legal-aid initiatives, NLUJA, Assam has sought to connect legal education with the needs of the profession, public institutions and society. This outward engagement is particularly significant for a University situated in the North-Eastern Region, where legal education carries an important responsibility to remain attentive to the distinctive social, economic, cultural and institutional contexts of the Region.

The Fourth Convocation provides an appropriate occasion to take stock of these developments. The conferment of degrees upon 107 graduands and scholars marks the culmination of years of study, training and research, but it also marks the beginning of a different form of responsibility. For those entering the legal profession, legal practice is not merely an exercise in applying rules; it requires judgement, integrity, sensitivity to human circumstances and fidelity to the constitutional order. For those proceeding towards research, public service, academia or other fields, the responsibility is no less significant: knowledge acquires its fullest meaning when it is placed in the service of institutions and society.

The University therefore looks upon the Convocation not simply as the conclusion of an academic cycle, but as a moment of institutional reflection and renewal. The progress recorded during the year carries with it the obligation to preserve academic standards while widening opportunity, to strengthen research while remaining responsive to social needs, and to expand institutional capacity without losing sight of the values that give legal education its purpose.

As the University enters the next phase of its development, its continuing task remains clear: to cultivate legal education that is rigorous in knowledge, responsible in application and conscious of its larger constitutional and social purpose. The graduates and scholars receiving their degrees at this Convocation carry with them not only the learning acquired at the University, but also the responsibility to place that learning in the service of law, justice and society.

NLUJA, Assam at a Glance

In 2008, the Prime Minister of India announced that the Central Government would extend assistance to the Government of Assam for establishing a Law School and Judicial Academy in the State. Pursuant to this initiative, the National Law School and Judicial Academy, Assam was established under the National Law School and Judicial Academy Act, 2009. Subsequently, the Act was amended, and the word “School” was substituted with “University”, giving the institution its present identity as the National Law University and Judicial Academy, Assam (NLUJA, Assam).

The University is committed to providing excellence in legal education, research and professional development, with a distinctive focus on the needs and aspirations of the North-Eastern region of India. It envisions nurturing committed, patriotic and justice (nyaya) oriented law graduates and postgraduates who uphold the values of constitutionalism, integrity and social responsibility. The University seeks to inspire its students to place service before self and contribute meaningfully towards building an egalitarian, inclusive and democratic society.

NLUJA, Assam strives to create an intellectually stimulating and inclusive academic environment that encourages critical thinking, legal scholarship, innovation and a deep understanding of law and justice. Through its academic programmes, research initiatives, seminars, conferences, moot court activities and other co-curricular engagements, the University seeks to prepare future members of the legal profession, academia, judiciary and public administration to respond effectively to the evolving needs of society.

The University is recognised by the University Grants Commission (UGC) under Sections 2(f) and 12(B) of the University Grants Commission Act, 1956, and is affiliated with the Bar Council of India. It is also accredited by the National Assessment and Accreditation Council (NAAC) with a B++ Grade.

Presently the National Law University and Judicial Academy, Assam is offering the following courses:

- B.A., LL.B. (Hons.) Five Year Integrated Course
- One Year LL.M. Degree Programme, and
- Ph.D. Programme

The University proposes to conduct Certificate and Diploma/ Degree Courses through distance mode and online under the aegis of the various Centres established in the University for advanced legal studies and research. The following Centres have been set up by the University with the intent to address the socio-legal issues and challenges specifically of the North-East region:
