June 5 is celebrated as World Environment Day. On this occasion, the Centre for Clinical Legal Education and Legal Aid Cell (CCLELAC) organized an environmental and legal awareness program at the Amingaon Higher Secondary School between 10:00 to 11:00 AM. The students of LLM program showed enthusiasm to participate in the event.

The principal and teachers of the school made the preliminary arrangements so that we could smoothly commence the program. The principal made preliminary remarks and started the program. Didarul Islam Laskar, an LLM student, explained the students right to clean air and water under the Constitution of India. He also emphasized upon the duties of people to protect the environment.

Arya Mirgane talked about the issue of environment pollution in general and suggested the various ways to mitigate the water and air pollution. The students keenly listened to the talk. Subsequently, Munirus Zamana Ahmed informed about the working of the legal aid cell of the University. Our speakers communicated in Assamese and Bengali both, considering the vernacular of the students of the school. It ensured the smooth exchange of views.

The students appeared to be very happy by the program. It was certainly a learning experience for them. In the end, we clicked some photos to create memories.
